

Childless

by Marta Aguilar

CHILDLESS

A LOST MATERNITY'S STORY

BY MARTA AGUILAR

144 pages

Psychologie - Sociology

- Over 25.000 copies sold in Spain
- With 9 editions—and counting—readers have left hundreds of comments and messages of encouragement.
- Sanlloriente is the first non-Indian world ambassador of the Bombay Leprosy Project.

SYNOPSIS

This is a gripping account of the deeply felt, sincere despair endured by a woman who has not been able, despite titanic efforts, to bear children. Childless takes a serene look at the unsoundable void barren women have to face, and the harsh rootlessness derived from it. Marta Aguilar let's us glance at her naked soul, and shares with us the most intimate and deep realizations a woman can share after having been through, among other tribulations, several unsuccessful fertility treatments and an abortion. Despite all this, she manages to tell her story without bitterness or cinicism, or holding her tongue.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Marta Aguilar (pseudonym) (1948) holds various degrees in literature as well as a doctorate in Sociology, and has expanded her knowledge through postgraduate courses in several American and European universities.

She has also been a professor and a researcher for a long time, although lately she has been focusing on her career as a lecturer and specialized press contributor. She is a tireless traveler, and has lived in many places. At the moment, she resides in Madrid, Spain.